Along with the society evolution, the role of social relations in the development of the individual can be observed, in increasing the society efficiency due to the norms and values that facilitate coordinated community actions.

In this context, social capital, seen as the set of interactions and relationships that individuals have, generates multiple benefits.

The scientific contributions of the authors in this panel will shed light on the characteristics of social capital (such as: social networks, mutual trust, norms, shared values of a cohesive society, cooperation), the legal and institutional framework in the matter.
